

About CCIEVault

Written by Alexei Spirin

Saturday, 05 January 2008 11:34 - Last Updated Wednesday, 11 November 2015 12:11

My name is Alexei Spirin aka asp13. I'm a network engineer, used to work in Cisco as a TSA and in cisco gold partner as a team lead of network security group. I have been working with cisco devices since 1999 and.. you know... I like it :) My "major" is a security technologies and products, but I have a good background in a backbone networks. I earned a CCIE Security in March 2006 with first attempt (yes, sometimes it happens :). I'm available at asp13.ccievault@gmail.com

Hey! I supposed to talk about what CCIEVault is and what it is for, so I just tell you the basic principles:

- 1) First of all, this site was made as a place where I can keep professional information. I just forget everything all the time, so let it be here
- 2) Keep things easy, the goal is quick learning/recalling (quick and I hope not so dirty :)
- 3) Third rule is to provide my personal experience along with basic information (so called best-practices)
- 4) And fourth, last but not least, provide the next step(s), for those who need more detailed info, links to guides, sources or manuals.